

IAI 2011-2016 Strategic Lines

The Urban and Communitarian Way: living well on our planet!

The main problems to address	Solutions to urban problems exist and are put forward by social organizations and democratic governments. The central problem in applying these solutions in practice is political: the system doesn't allow such action and should therefore be replaced. In this context, the struggles to guarantee rights underpin the struggles to change the system, i.e. to build "another possible world".
Basic principles that guide our actions	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>□ Housing is a right for everyone and not a commodity.</li> <li>□ Air, water and land are rights and belong to everyone on the planet, they are not commodities.</li> <li>□ The Right to the City and to territory is superior to the sum of universal rights that should be applicable in human settlements, such as adequate housing, education, nourishing food, dignified employment, medical care and resources.</li> <li>□ Inhabitants have the responsibility to exercise all these rights both individually and collectively, through living, protesting and governing.</li> </ul>
The context that justifies our struggles	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>□ The current global civilization crisis is caused by capitalist colonization that exploited and plundered nature and humanity to the point of near extinction. Climate change and energy crises are growing worse and economies in the most powerful countries are adopting structural adjustment policies, the most visible elements being: war, economies founded on bubbles and shocks, an increase in the vulnerability of working rights and in slave labour, external debt, currencies with speculative values, vulnerability of financial markets, budget cuts, soaring unemployment, etc.</li> <li>□ Another dramatic effect of the global capitalist crisis is the unprecedented increase in the numbers of people starving every day: in 2009 there were more than a billion people, a growing proportion of them from the urban milieu. Billions more do not have a minimum level of food security.</li> <li>□ The number of people who are homeless, lacking in housing security and living in inhumane conditions is also above a billion; the most optimistic calculations indicate that there will be two billion of them within 20 years. This also occurs where the bubble has produced more housing than necessary, a result of the lack of responsible public policies combined with the voracity of speculators and investors driven purely by profit.</li> <li>□ Evictions in their multiple forms and under their various pretexts are the cruellest and most barbaric symptom of this inhumane development; they are increasing in number and brutality, taking a variety of forms. They are the most patent violation of the right to live well in the city, and therefore should be at the core of our struggles.</li> <li>□ The exponential increase in land grabbing, a new instrument of colonialization, amplifies the negative phenomena of globalization: it focuses on certain areas of the planet according to the interests of the dominant economies (industrial agriculture, biofuels and tourism), destroys the richness of diversity (communities, environment, local economies) and widens the gap with poor countries.</li> <li>□ Impoverished countries with democratic governments have managed to remove millions of families from a situation of poverty. Nevertheless, despite these positive experiences, the influence of economic power is even greater than that of organized social movements. The participation of social movements and democratic governments therefore needs to be stepped up and extended even further.</li> </ul>

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>□ The reorganization of cities – the construction of housing, work on improving mobility, accessibility, infrastructure and drainage – can induce sustainable growth and create opportunities for alternatives in a world marked by the capitalist crisis.</li> </ul>
IAI Mission	The IAI's mission is to construct the "Urban and Communitarian Way", a joint, global and supportive space for organizations and inhabitant networks to share their experiences, draw up strategies and platforms, manage tools, determine and implement commitments, in order to reinforce solidarity with glocal struggles to defend inhabitants and prepare for "another possible world": to living well on our planet . The "Urban and Communitarian Way" is central to the IAI's vision, since it implies reappropriating the social function of ownership, cities and, in general, territory. We confirm that social movements have an accumulated experience that can be put to use to reclaim and defend cities, culture, knowledge and abilities, sustainability, self-determination and the sovereignty of peoples, justice, peace and democracy. All these reasons underpin the IAI's struggle to protect our right and our responsibility to play a part in building, using and governing our cities and our territory, reinforcing ties of solidarity. We hereby reaffirm our desire to take collaborative action, on equal terms and in a spirit of mutual cooperation, from the local to the global level. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>□ We therefore wish to build on the previous processes and initiatives that have been and are being developed in the same spirit throughout the world. They have produced declarations and principles that we adopt.</li> <li>□ We adhere to the principles expressed in the WSF Charter of Principles, San Salvador Charter, International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (art.11) and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (art.25).</li> <li>□ On the basis of these principles, we reaffirm our decision to unite our experience by consolidating the International Alliance of Inhabitants and thereby reinforce the strategies adopted by social movements to find a solution to the global crisis and housing crisis, products of an inequitable Social Pact with no future, by building another possible world.</li> <li>□ We are committed to the notion of development and creation of networks of new types of inhabitants-activists with their feet firmly planted in their territory and their heads full of the knowledge that cities represent a major international challenge.</li> </ul>
Strategic objective for 2011-2016	IAI has invested strategically in the World Assembly of Inhabitants (WAI) process, an initiative led by inhabitants' movements. The WAI has provided a platform for actors that campaign using their neighbourhoods, programmes and priorities as the starting point, and therefore represents a promising political investment. The process demonstrates that: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• inhabitants with different socio-political backgrounds suffer from violations of the right to habitat and various obstacles whose underlying causes can be found in the neoliberal system, founded on a Social Pact that violates the sovereignty of human rights, territorial sovereignty, social equity and sustainability;</li> <li>• the different campaigns waged by inhabitants' organizations prove that it is possible to find appropriate and sustainable solutions to the urban, housing and global crisis in order to re-establish</li> </ul>

	the sovereignty of human rights, territorial sovereignty, equity and sustainability; <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• there is a real feeling that revolutionary changes are possible in the 21st century, and that inhabitants could usefully contribute to such changes.</li> </ul> The development of the WAI process represents the coming together of the local, regional and global levels to create a worldwide federation of inhabitants' organizations and urban social movements. On this basis, we will continue to build the Urban and Communitarian Way, with the intention of creating a joint, global and supportive space and a way for inhabitants' organizations and networks to share their experiences, draw up strategies and platforms, manage tools and determine and implement commitments in order to strengthen solidarity with global campaigns and defend inhabitants from attacks. During this period, we will also be looking to reforge the Urban Social Pact on the primacy of the alternative paradigm of human and environmental rights and on inhabitants' responsibility to build and govern human settlements, key to living well on our planet.
Central theme for the period	Building the Urban and Communitarian Way, a task that should draw on different cultural, social and political processes from different geographical areas, requires the IAI to be consolidated as a mindful and vital hub governing the multi-level and shared process with the aim of creating a worldwide federation: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• creation of Joint Committees on several levels as well as development of WAI Joint Committees that encounter other existing initiatives;</li> <li>• recognition of the intellectual dimension of social actors and the building up of collective and multiple intelligence founded on a shared memory and using the systematization of acquired knowledge and proposals, a task initiated by the WAI and the process of collecting together social movement experiences by co-producing knowledge at the regional and international level;</li> <li>• linking up with all organizations in the urban and rural world, particularly Via Campesina, which has improved its operational policy documents applicable to the rural and peasant universe, and carries out campaigns in parallel with ours;</li> <li>• definition of the primacy of the alternative paradigm and the alliances and partnerships necessary to reforge the Urban Social Pact, key to living well on our planet by moving to another possible world;</li> <li>• definition of an Urban and Communitarian Way policy document as well as the programme and missions for a process that encompasses struggles and proposals, based on the need to respond quickly and appropriately to calls for solidarity and on the time needed for inhabitants' organisations and their networks to develop at the global and local levels.</li> </ul>
